AGENCY HIGHLIGHTS ON THE HORIZON

CONNECTING PARENTS TO EXPANDED SERVICES

Brighton Center's dedication to Early Childhood Education is expanding! Both our Every Child Succeeds and Home Instruction for Parents of Preschool Youngsters (HIPPIY) programs have expanded to serve more parents and their young children. Our Every Child Succeeds program has expanded from serving only first time parents to also include parents with more than one child up to the age of 12 weeks. Every Child Succeeds is designed to optimize child development and promote a variety of positive outcomes through home visits to families. HIPPIY has expanded services into Grant & Kenton counties allowing an additional 20 families to benefit from this kindergarten preparatory program which is designed to strengthen the parent's role as their child's first teacher. Home visits occur weekly with parents of children ages three to four years old and bi-weekly for children age five.

NORTHERN KENTUCKY SCHOLAR HOUSE NEARING COMPLETION

After three years of research, planning, and collaboration with Neighborhood Foundations, Northern Kentucky Scholar House is set to welcome the first set of residents and their children mid August. Construction started in August of 2014 on the 48 two and three bedroom apartments and the Early Scholars Child Development Center. This innovative initiative will develop post-secondary educational opportunities for low-income single parents and their children, leading to educational success, employment, and self-sufficiency. The multi-generational approach Northern Kentucky Scholar House takes will allow parents to pursue higher education while ensuring children are on track for success in life and school through the on-site Early Scholars Child Development Center. Openings are still available for interested parents.

CREATING CONNECTIONS TO HELP OTHERS ACHIEVE THEIR HOPES AND DREAMS

MAKING A CONNECTION THAT CHANGED A LIFE

IN HER OWN WORDS: Before I came to Brighton Center's Center for Employment training (CET), I struggled with a lifelong belief that I wasn't really good enough. I had skills, but none that were sharply developed. I've always sort of been a jack of all trades with a fear of success.

I have never thought of myself as patient, but I guess hope is a form of patience and having hope can be a miracle. Hope that things would get better someday was all I had to dream by. I was working a temp job that I hated because it was far too physically strenuous for my body to handle, and a co-worker took the time to notice my pain and asked me why I didn't get an office job. I replied that I didn't have the skills, and she told me about CET. She said she regretted that she didn't finish the program and urged me to look into it. I would love to see her now and thank her for pointing out the path that would change my life. I would do all I could to convince her to return.

At the beginning of my journey here, I was determined to shine. I wanted a better life and I felt like this was my last chance since traditional college hadn't worked for me. My Associate Degree and awards from art school never seemed to get me anywhere. I wanted to be perfect, and I became discouraged and withdrawn with each mistake I made. However, I found the staff and my fellow students to be very supportive and forgiving. I started to learn that I didn't have to be perfect to do well; I just had to do my best. One of my greatest barriers has always been the fear of "saying the wrong thing", of "looking stupid," or offending someone unintentionally. I would obsess over a simple conversation for days, analyzing everything I said and how it might have been interpreted. However, as I observed my fellow students interact during Success Skills, I realized they weren't judging each other, and they weren't judging me.

I began to realize that I had gone through life with a negative attitude, and I started changing and growing. I began actively trying to build relationships with positive people, and I began working cooperatively as part of a group for the first time. I found that the parts of me which I had always tried to hide could in fact be shared in a tactful and appropriate way, and that allowed me to open up and be myself without fear. I learned to define myself and what success means to me in a new way. I no longer felt like a damsel in distress in need of rescuing. I began to feel like a strong individual and a partner to the good, supportive man who had become part of my life only a year before I began CET.

Brighton Center has impacted every facet of my life. My personal relationships have grown more positive as I have learned to accept and expect positivity from myself and others. Although I began rather self-absorbed, I have enjoyed seeing my fellow students grow into outgoing and positive friends. I get an amazing feeling of capability when I can help someone work through and understand projects from the curriculum, and I have learned to accept help from others. The Conflict Management workshop really impressed upon me the wisdom to say, "It's not you versus me, it's us versus the problem"; a perspective which has become common in my household during disagreements.

I have always had hopes and dreams, but I never believed so many would become a reality. I have learned to accept good things for myself, and to embrace the challenges of success. Now, as I prepare to leave CET and begin a career with a reputable company, I am quickly realizing new hopes and dreams, and gleefully naming them goals. I want to start a college fund for my young daughter, and work towards getting her into a good school. I never want her to feel like she isn't good enough to achieve goals. I want to give back to my family and community, and continue building and growing with the wonderful man who has stood by me through my journey. Although I am afraid of the unknown challenges, I now have the courage and skills to face them one day at a time.

CONNECTING MOTHER & SON

Sam found Brighton Center during a very trying time in her life. She had recently quit her job at a nursing home to care for her ill mother and discovered she was pregnant. In October of 2011 she enrolled in Every Child Succeeds while continuing to care for her mother. Her home visitor completed 14 sessions with Sam before she gave birth to her son Brody in March 2012. Those visits helped Sam prepare for motherhood and what to expect during labor, delivery, and the first few weeks home with Brody. Over the next three years, Sam, Brody, and their visitor continued to meet. Sam learned how to care for, interact with, and teach Brody as he met developmental milestones.

"Every Child Succeeds showed me how to be a better parent. They gave me ways to have one-on-one time with my son, ideas for little projects, and tools to help my son become the best little man he can."

Due to her family situation, Sam continued to stay home to care for Brody and her mother all while trying to make unemployment benefits stretch. When her unemployment ran out, Sam struggled to make ends meet, and her mother continued to have medical issues. With encouragement from her home visitor, Sam enrolled in Brighton Center's Center for Employment Training (CET) initially in Medical Assisting and then switched to Business and Computer Technologies, as it was a better fit.

Sam's home visitor also connected her to vital parenting resources, the Clothing Closet, assistance from the Food Pantry, additional public benefits and help during the holidays through the Holiday Drive. In return, Sam has given back in any way she can by playing Santa Claus at the Every Child Succeeds Holiday Party, serving on the CET graduation committee, helping fellow classmates, and as a resource to other Every Child Succeeds mothers.

In the spring of 2015, Sam and Brody, now three years old, completed the Every Child Succeeds program and graduated. Brody finished on target in all critical developmental areas. Sam plans to enroll Brody into Brighton Center's Home Instruction for Parents of Preschool Youngsters (HIPPPY) program to start in the fall where he will continue learning to stay on track for Kindergarten. Sam is also on track to finish at CET in the fall.

"There is not a staff member that I have encountered that hasn't helped me in one way or another no matter what the problem is."

CONNECTING SKILLS TO THE NEED

TURNER CONSTRUCTION COMPANY GIVES BACK IN BIG WAYS

Turner Construction Company first got involved with Brighton Center back in 2008 as part of our Paint the Town Blue community partnership initiative. Turner project executive Tim Allison connected Brighton Center to other Turner Construction employees through his involvement on the Board of Directors.

Tim was recruited by one of Brighton Center's original organizers (who also happened to be his mother-in-law), but Tim stayed involved because of the mission, "Brighton Center focuses on offering people a hand up, not a hand out. They are all about helping people get back on their feet however they can, and helping them become self-sufficient. That is a mission I can definitely get behind."

Since 2008, Tim has led Turner's involvement with several projects, including work performed at individual homes, Homeward Bound, and the Recovery Center for Women. "We will continue to stay involved with Brighton Center as long as they'll have us," says Tim. "It's the right thing to do."

Over the last five years, Turner Construction and its employees have dedicated countless hours and support to Brighton Center. Projects include repairing a ramp at Bright Days Child Development Center, building a storage room with shelves at Homeward Bound Shelter, assisting a Brighton Center family with costly home renovations as part of their Paint the Town Blue initiative, throwing a Holiday Party for youth, assisting with landscaping around buildings, and always providing a helping hand whenever possible. We are truly grateful for Turner Construction's partnership.

CONNECTING CUSTOMERS TO THE BEST SERVICES IN NKY

Bright Days Child Development Center and CENTER TABLE, Catering With A Purpose, were both nominated as Best of NKY finalists through Northern Kentucky Magazine. Thousands of readers nominated businesses and organizations in over 60 categories including Best Catering and Preschool for the recognition as one of the best.

VOLUNTEER SPOTLIGHT

ALAN & DIANNE THOMAS: LEAVING A LEGACY FOR OTHERS

Alan and Dianne Thomas are exemplary advocates for Brighton Center. Alan is a Board member and recently named Chair of the Development Committee where he generously shares his extensive knowledge of fundraising and donor cultivation best practices. Dianne volunteers at the food pantry weekly and has served on the Gala Committee for several years. Last year, when Brighton Center began discussing the importance of Planned Giving, Alan and Dianne were there once again to lead by example by making their own legacy bequest to ensure vital services are provided to those who need them.

Three years ago, shortly after both of us retired and having shown an interest in becoming involved with Brighton Center, we were invited to an "introduction to Brighton Center" luncheon at the Center for Employment Training facility. We were so impressed by the enthusiasm of the staff and their grasp of the issues that we decided Brighton would be a perfect fit for us. To have a community of support in our own "backyard" committed to creating opportunities for individuals and families to reach self-sufficiency through family support services, education, employment, and leadership as Brighton's mission states makes us really proud to be a part of it.

Since that first luncheon we have become entirely "immersed" in the culture of Brighton Center. I had the opportunity as a Board member to visit a number of program areas including Early Childhood Education, Brighton Recovery Center, Youth Leadership Development, Homeward Bound, and the Family Center. Recently I was given a tour of the Newport Community Gardens and visited the brand new Northern Kentucky Scholar House. So much good work going on!

Dianne and I have also committed financial support to Brighton Center as active participants and sponsors of the special events, contributing our annual support as Sustaining members (monthly amount taken out of our checking account), and recently joining the "1966 Club" with a planned gift to help Brighton Center continue its wonderful mission. We encourage all of you to become involved in a meaningful way.

SHARE WHAT YOU CAN Helped 500 Families

The generous food donation from Crawford Insurance, Citizens Bank of Northern Kentucky, and the community of Ft. Thomas, received during the Share What You Can event, has allowed us to keep our food pantry shelves stocked during the summer months. Through the event, we collected over four barrels of food. This food helps us to meet the needs of the over 500 families we see each month during the summer. The summer is a critical time for our Food Pantry. With the children out of school, many families rely on our Food Pantry to supplement their family's food needs.

Thank You Katie Walters for Emceeding Share What You Can.
